I. Introduction

Nowadays, there are lots of children in need of our concern. As we can see, there are a lot of news about children to be abandoned. So we want to research why these children would be abandoned and harmed, and tragic stories behind them, we hope that everyone could give them more attention about what the problems they have faced.

1.1 Motivation

In now society, there is a lot of news talking about more and more children who were abandoned by their parents, and we found out the population in the children shelter are getting higher than before. Through this project, we want to understand more about the shelters. Many people still have stereotypes about the children shelters, which used to be called orphanages. So everyone's first think of the shelter is taking in an orphan who didn't have parents. When it comes to shelters, people think of children who lost their parents. With this special topic, we want to change the negative images of shelters. We hope this project could be helpful to the children. Let them can get more concern and help.

1.2 Purposes and Research Question

- Why are so many cases of pregnancy out of wedlock?
- What are the reasons that children get abandoned?
- Is the resource in each shelter enough to support children there?

1.3 Methodology

The methodology has used in follow ways such like data collection, field trip, interview and paper questionnaire. We will find some data and information on the internet, book and journal. And we will also go to the shelter and have the interview with their dean and the staff who work at the shelter. Then have the paper questionnaire to the public so that we can get more information and data about the children shelter.

II. Thesis

2.1 Literature Review

2.1.1 Region

In Taiwan, there are totally 53 children shelters, 31 dens of the north, 7 dens of the central of Taiwan, 12 dens of the south and 4 dens of the east.

2.1.2 Compare government and the public

Through our visit, the data shows that government distribute 30 percent of public allowance to private shelters and 70 percent to the public ones and public's allowance is 3:7, government give private shelter 30% money and a little material, maybe Chung Yi is a private shelter so the allowance would be lower than the municipal shelters. The rest 70% are from public fund raising, donate invoice and some materials like clothes, shoes...etc. So, private shelter's goods are mostly from the public.

2.2 Data Discussion and Analysis

2.2.1 The result of Interview

After the interview we got some following conclusion as table 2 to 4

Table2. The reasons why children be abandoned

Reasons	Description
● Parents are too young to grow their children	Some younger parents got pregnant suddenly, and they didn't have ability to grow them.
● Parents don't have enough money and source to raise them	Parents too young and still in school, so they didn't have time and stable income to support the cost of raising children.
● Domestic violence	Parents suffer from long-term economic pressure, so they wreak the emotion on their children frequently. Another reason was their parents who remarry, and the children get abused and sexual assault by their step-parent. Domestic violence is mainly categorized into two types: physical and spiritual.

Table 3. Positive and Negative perceptions that the society have on children in the shelter

● Positive	● Negative
These children are more independent and their thoughts are more mature than in the same age children.	Many people think these children are pitiful and won't have any achievement. The public think these children will take on some bad habits, for example, smoking, alcoholism, fighting and taking drugs.

Table 4. The society's positive and negative perceptions about shelters

● Positive	● Negative
There are lot of shelters and charity institutions which help these pitiful children. The shelter give these children a warm house and they motivate these children.	There are many organizations and institutions provide these children supplies, there also have some organizations cheat the public in the name of raising funds for charity.

We visited Chung Yi social welfare foundation twice. For the first time, before we went to there, we prepared some questions that we wanted to research beforehand and be the volunteers to help them arranged the documents. Second time, someone who worked at the foundation showed us around so that we know about the environment where these children live.

The volunteer told us the following information about the shelter:

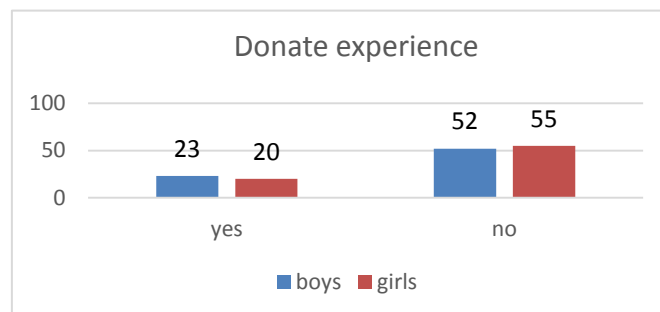

1. The government will check randomly and ask any kinds of questions to the shelter children.
2. Most of children have psychological trauma, when the counselors face this kind of children, they would one by one urgent counseling, and more serious children would treat by psychological counselor.
3. Every different age children all distribution in different floor, prevent older children bully younger children.
4. There are some reasons let children be abandoned, such like their parents are too young or didn't have enough money to grow their children.

We went to interview the shelter; we realized that these children are strong and brave. This kind of situations would not happen in the wealthy family; and these children have experienced something unknown to us. Their independence made us reflect on ourselves. We feel so insignificant in front of them. A high school student's self-care ability cannot compare with that of a primary school child. In their pure eyes, we saw their; loneliness. Maybe they still hope that they hadn't been abandoned ever.

2.2.2 The result of survey

A case study of investigating Chung-Yi shelter

(Chart 3) The result shows that few students have volunteered at shelters. Students might go to the cram school on the weekend or on weekdays, most of students' end of school quite late. For these two reasons, students don't have time to be a volunteer.

(Chart 4) In this chart, it is indicated students that if they have time they will try to be a volunteer to devote their effort because they want to help these disadvantaged groups.

(Chart 5) Most students think of shelter children in a positive way. Before did this survey, many people view these children in negative way. After finishing this survey, we changed our thoughts. The public didn't have any negative stereotype.

III. Conclusion

After we done a series of investigation, we got two following conclusions, the first one is the interview, and the second one is survey.

The result of interview shows that the resources and supplies still not enough for every child in the shelter. And the volunteer told us the reasons why they be abandoned are their parents are too young to grow them and domestic violence...etc.

Besides, the society still have stereotype to these children, but most of people think of them are positive.

The result of the survey shows that most of people didn't have time to notice the information of the shelter but they have willing to be the volunteer to give them more concern.
